Members of United States Industrial College Visit Torrance National Supply

Sixteen students and faculty members of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, Washington, D. C., visited the Torrance Plant of the National Supply Division, Armco Steel Corporation on January 16.

This is the ninth consecutive year that the National Supply plant here has been selected by the Industrial College as part of the annual field trip of its student members.

The Industrial College is one of the country's senior joint service colleges. It operates under the direction of the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff and devotes its efforts to the study of the economic aspects of conflict between nations.

The economic - industrial status of the U.S. is studied against the background of the interrelated economic, social, political, scientific, psychological and military factors. Students who attend the ten-month resident course at the College include 150 selected senior officers of the military services and key civilian officials from agencies of government concerned with the economics of national security.

FIRST HAND VIEW
The purpose of these visits to industrial areas is to give the students a first-hand understanding of the operational, managerial, and financial problems of typical American industries. Special consideration is given to inter-industry relationships, the impact of American investments in and competition from foreign industrial areas, and government-industry relations.

This field trip was supervised by Colonel Charles I. Davis, U.S. Army, a member of the College faculty. The visiting group included Rear Admiral G. Serpell Patrick, U.S. Navy, the Deputy Commandant of the Industrial College, who is in charge of its resident division. Admiral Patrick presented National's manager, J. D. Spaulding, a certificate of appreciation "for the significant contribution that National Supply made to the educational program of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces on the occasion of the visit by its students and faculty."
